27 July 2016 – Let's Play Teacher Competition

Learning through imaginary play has long been recognized as an important component of child development.

Role play provides children with the opportunity to develop imagination and also improve their social skills and creativity.

Hands up if you love toplay teacher – teacher ask this question to any group of children and loads of hands shoots up kids love school expecially when they get opportunity to enact like a teacher.

Considering these facts Blooms had organized an activity Let's Play Teacher. It was an inter class competition. In this activity the enacted like a teacher. Some displayed the nick nacks of being a teacher with their costumes and the activity it was a great success with maximum participation.
