Q1. Read the following passage carefully : (8)

1. I guess you can say I fled. Once, I desperately needed a break. So, I applied for leave and reached my brother's home, 360 kilometres away.
2. I have had rheumatoid arthritis since the age of 12. I can only sit on flat surfaces. My bed, my portable commode and my wheelchair, all have to be specially made. Each time I go on a long trip, I have to take the whole entourage along. My sister-in-law took me to a student's dormitory and a place at the back of my brother's house, next to an apple orchard, where I could stay.
3. From a distance, the trees began to tease me with glistening spots of tempting red. As I wheeled closer, I realised that they were laden with fruit. Each cluster had 20 to 30 big apples. Yet the railings, fencing the orchard, were rusty. Except for the apples, the whole place looked quite dead.
4. My brother had three children : two boys, ten year old Hakon and seven year old Thomas, and a three year old daughter whom we affectionately called Mei-ya, meaning little girl. As soon as the boys came back from school, I'd put my books and manuscripts away in the drawer. Hakon would get my wheelchair ready and push me out on an exploration. Four kids from the neighbourhood would tag along uninvited. The contingent of seven three to eleven year olds, hung round me all day.
5. "There are plenty of apples in the orchard. It's such a pity nobody is picking them", I told the children.
6. The youngsters immediately understood me. They yelled, "Let's check it out". We were soon there.

7. The orchard stood quietly in the sunlight. The apples were red and enticing. Our gaze was fixed on them. Without losing a moment, the small thieves rushed at the fruits, but the bigger and riper ones were higher up and out of reach. I promptly told the children to fetch a broken table and a piece of wire from the rubbish dump. Then, I showed them how to fasten the wire into a hook. Two of the taller kids stood on the table, one pulling and the second picking the fruits. The other passed them down busily enjoying themselves.
8. The small thieves admired my ingenuity. "Auntie, you are really great". They ran around everywhere in excitement. They screamed and yelled. In the midst of the commotion, the children's father suddenly appeared out of nowhere and caught us unawares. The small thieves fled, leaving me, the gang chief neatly cornered.
9. "So, you have turned into a petty thief", my brother joked. "What if you are arrested?"
10. "Arrested? Me? Do I look like a thief to you?" I sat up in my wheelchair and, feigning innocence, said, "Am I capable of such an act, considering my physical condition?"
11. Laughing, my brother pushed me home. I was not really after the apples. I was trying to steal the quality called childhood.

Q2. Read the following passage carefully. (7)

Long before Independence, the low level of industrialisation had been identified as the major cause of India's economic backwardness and the poverty of the people. Top Indian industrialists, economists and political leaders had formulated a 15-year plan for rapid industrial advance in order to double the national income. With this prior consensus in favour of planning, the Planning Commission was set up by Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru under his own chairmanship, as an expert non-political body to draw up five-year plans for India's economic development.

The first constraints which the planners faced, in their attempts to set up investment in industry and agriculture, transport and mining as well as in education and health, was the shortage of capital. With the low per-capita income of the people, barely enough for sustenance, the level of voluntary savings was miserably low. The state had to mobilise savings through taxation and borrowings. These resources were used for public sector investments in infrastructure, power and railways, as well as in some key industries, which called for heavy investment of a magnitude which could not be readily raised by private parties. At the same time, to help the private sector fulfil the targets assigned by the planners, financial institutions were created to provide long-term loans and support equity issues.

SECTION-A (READING - 15 MARKS)

- Q1. Read the following passage carefully : (8)
1. That morning I awoke to the sound of steady drizzle which sounded like tiny hoof-beats upon the roof. I now knew that the outing that my friends and I had planned for this holiday would definitely be cancelled. There would be no question of that excursion taking place—riding many miles out on bicycles was quite out of the question in such inclement weather conditions. I was decidedly depressed as I had placed great store upon that excursion taking place. But I had to console myself by thinking of the proverb—Man proposes and God disposes.
  2. I lazed in bed for some time longer than it was customary for me to do. Then I got up and had a wash, dressed and went down for breakfast. My mother was already busy about her household chores and she greeted me quite as cheerfully as ever. I sauntered for the meal chiefly because I did not want to hurt mother's feelings. I did not feel cheerful but there was no point in complaining about something beyond her control or mine. So I sat down to breakfast and made the best of polite conversation between mother and son. After some time she said : 'Son, I nearly forgot to tell you that Jimmy phoned up to say that the outing was off on account of the rain. He said that you could arrange it on some other occasion when the weather was not so foul'.
  3. You know that it is like? Well, I finished breakfast and went back up to my room to sit and decide what I was going to do to keep myself occupied. I switched on the record player and listened to some music but it did not appeal much to me that morning. The rain seemed to have dampened my spirits pretty badly. Then for a change, I took from my bookshelf a book of poems and tried to concentrate on some of the philosophic thoughts therein. Then I began reading a novel.

4. Towards two o'clock the weather cleared up. Lunch being over, mother and I settled down for a chat when the doorbell rang and who should enter but my married sister and her husband. We were really surprised to see them because they lived in another town quite far away. They had come by car and had wanted to give us a surprise. Sure enough, it was a very welcome surprise. More so, when they announced that they had planned to take us back with them. The next day being Sunday, we could stay with them. Now this was really a pleasant surprise for me and for Mum. It did not take us long to pack up.
5. Just before we could leave home the phone rang; it was Jimmy again : he suggested that the outing be planned for the next day. I told him to go ahead and to have a good time—I would not be there. Upon his asking me what had gone wrong with me, as I had been the one to be so eager about it, I merely replied that I had far better things to do. I was glad—right glad that it had rained that day.

Q2. Read the following passage carefully. (7)

The aim of education is to enable the human personality to grow to its full stature. Man has a body, a mind, and a spirit. Accordingly, education aims at the physical, the intellectual, the spiritual and the moral development of man.

Games are a means of keeping the body healthy and fit. Physical fitness and freedom from all kinds of ailments are the desire and ambition of every human being. Indeed, good health is the first condition of happiness in life. Those who play games generally maintain good health. Games are an excellent means of bodily exercise. Whether it is sophisticated games like hockey, football and tennis or simpler games like kabaddi, they all provide the much needed exercise to the body and thus keep the body healthy and strong. Players always have a better appetite and a better digestion than those who play no games or take no exercise. Games not only make the body healthy and strong, they also make it muscular. Apart from building the body, games are an excellent recreation or pastime. Education teaches people the need and value of recreational activities. Education does not approve of the bookworm, who is lost in books all the time. Recreation is necessary. And games are among the most interesting recreations in the world. The essence of recreation is that it refreshes both body and mind, and provides a means of escape from one's professional or scholarly pursuits. Thus games are very useful as a diversion for the mind.
